I went to see WWF wrestling when I was about six years old and it was cool but crazy. There were lots of people screaming and yelling for thier favorit fighter. There is also consesion stands and drink stands. Thats how it was when I went to see WWF when I was six.

When you go to a wrestling match the screaming and yelling is crazy. People are cheering for their favorit wrestler using signs and yelling to them.

The consesion stands have hotdogs, nachos, cotton candy, and pretzels. The drink stands sell lemonade, water, and Beer.

Organization/Purpose: Score 2

- The plot is inconsistent: the writer tells of attending a WWF wrestling event, but by the second paragraph, he shifts viewpoint to “you,” and merely describes features of the event, not a sequence of events.
- The writer only minimally orients the reader to the event, partly because he shifts viewpoint, gives no description of the characters who wrestle, only of his one feelings about the event.
- Transitional strategies are not smooth: the narrative is repetitive, describing in paragraphs 2 and 3 aspects of the experience that are described in paragraph 1.
- The text ends abruptly, without closure.

Evidence/Elaboration: Score 2

- The setting and characters are identified but not developed.
- No narrative techniques to move the reader from one point to the next are used; instead, a description of aspects of the event replace narration.
- Concrete imagery is minimal but present: “hot dogs, nachos, cotton candy, and pretzels”; “yelling” for the wrestlers. Imagery related to the wrestling itself is non-existent.

Conventions: Score 1

- Limited use of correct spelling: numerous errors are scattered throughout.
- Limited use of correct grammar and usage: “There is concession stands”; “the screaming and yelling is crazy.”
